

David Seidner

Yves Saint Laurent

This exhibition explores the collaborative work between David Seidner (1957–1999) and the House of Yves Saint Laurent. The images seen here, taken from 1983 to 1995, display the confidence and freedom granted to the young artist by the renowned couturier.

Shortly after meeting Pierre Bergé in Paris in the early 1980s, Seidner was entrusted with creating the image that would launch Paris perfume. He would go on to photograph numerous advertising campaigns for the couture house while continuing his personal artistic research, which was celebrated by major exhibitions of his non-fashion work.

Influenced by Surrealism and the pastels of Edouard Manet, as well as by the great fashion photographers of the 20th century who preceded him, Seidner's sophisticated and rigorously composed images, imbued with a delicate elegance and an extraordinary "strangeness," dissolve the border between art and fashion.

David Seidner
(1957–1999)

David Seidner (1957-1999) quitte sa ville natale de Los Angeles à l'âge de dix-sept ans et s'installe à Paris pour y travailler comme photographe de mode. À dix-neuf ans, ses photos font déjà la couverture des magazines. Il connaît sa première exposition personnelle en 1978. Basé à Paris durant la majeure partie de sa carrière, Seidner signe un contrat d'exclusivité de deux ans avec la maison Yves Saint Laurent. Au cours des années 1980 et 1990, ses images sont publiées dans Harper's Bazaar, Harpers & Queen, The New York Times Magazine, Vanity Fair et différentes éditions internationales de Vogue. Son travail, qui se distingue par l'usage fréquent de la fragmentation, de l'éclairage dynamique et du recadrage, a profondément influencé la photographie de mode pendant plus d'une décennie.
